GOV. CONNER CHARGES EFFORT FOR CONVENTION BLOCKED BY POLITICIANS

Trying to Procure Working Majority for Proposed Constitutional Convention—Governor Replies to Attack of Senator Jimmie Waddell of Meridian—Says No Session for Beer Only.

Jackson, Miss., Sept. 8.—Governor Sennett Conner charged in an address here today that "the politicians" are trying to block his efforts to obtain a "working majority" in the Mississippi Legislature for the purpose of convening an extraordinary session soon to call a state constitutional convention.

"The people of Mississippi know whom I am talking about, those politicians," he said without identifying the group he charges are opposing his fight for a new constitution for the state.

Support of the governor's position came today from Representative Walter Sillers to Rosealea, chairman of the House judiciary committee, and one of the close administration advisors, who said that the "paramount need" now is for reorganization of the state and county governmental machinery.

The judiciary chairman declared that the present system of government had allowed the building up of a bonded indebtedness for the state, county and lesser political subdivisions of $168,350,000.

"The tremendous bonded debt and high taxes are accumulations from governmental activities for many years preceding the depression," said chairman Sillers.

"From investigations made by economic and governmental experts, and by legislative committees, it has been pointed out that the causes of our trouble lie in the improper conduct of state and county government."

Waddell Replies.

Governor Conner's veiled attack on Senator Jimmie Waddell, of Meridian, whose leaflet criticizing the governor's suggested constitutional convention has been mailed out of Jackson, brought a sharp rejoinder today from the Meridian solon.

The governor had charged that a "well organized and probably well financed" effort was being made to try to block a constitutional convention.

"For your information, the 'interests' motivating this letter was my own sincere interest in my state and people, and if you desire it, I shall be glad to give you the names of the individual citizens and exact amounts contributed to make up the $76.20 necessary to pay the entire expense of printing and mailing these letters," reads a letter Senator Waddell sent the governor today.

Governor Conner, in his address, again complained that his greatest difficulty was in getting "information and data" before ten people. His remarks caught the reporters especially by surprise, they having dogged his footsteps daily seeking information on his proposed call for extraordinary session, and whatever other information his excellency was willing to make public.

In today's press conference, the governor reiterated most emphatically that he has no intention of calling an extraordinary session only for legalization of beer. He had just said that he hesitated calling an extraordinary session before the majority of the House and Senate had agreed on the minute details for the calling and holding of a constitutional convention.

Not for Beer Only.

"It would be an unnecessary expense on the taxpayers to call the Legislature in session, and have them divide hopelessly on the setting up of the machinery for the convention," he said.

"But, governor, if you submitted the beer bill at one session, wouldn't the taxes from beer now being sold in Mississippi more than pay the cost of the extraordinary session?" one of the reporters asked him. "You are the first person to mention beer to me since I started the constitutional convention question," he replied.

"Besides, I have already voted on beer. There will be no special session for beer only. That's that."

Governor Conner's legislative reorganization committee that when he does convene an extraordinary session, he will submit to the Legislature beer and repeal for consideration with other legislation.

Two members of the national Congress, Senator Pat Harrison and Congressman Will H. Whittington, are making public speeches urging legalization of beer at the earliest possible moment.

The governor would not hazard a guess at the date he intends to take the extraordinary session to take up the constitutional convention. "I don't know myself," he said, adding that he wanted to give the legislators ample time to think over his proposal.

"What is your interpretation of

DEDEAUX SCHOOL OPENING

M. L. Richardson, Superintendent—First Day Reports Five Hundred Enrollment.

Dedeaux Consolidated High School, on the Hancock-Harrison county line, opened for registration Friday and a large gathering of pupils and patrons and other friends greeted the superintendent, Prof. M. L. Richardson, who introduced the faculty.

Hon. George Dean, county superintendent of education of Harrison county, spoke on the line of the duty of patrons to school, stressing the attitude of teachers being at their posts with no assurance of pay. It was quite a gathering and evinced the proper interest for school. Five hundred pupils were enrolled and the outlook for an active and successful season is bright.

Miss May Hicks Edwards, Hancock county's chairman for Red Cross cloth and flour distribution, spoke on the problem of division of materials in order to take care of all needy families in the county. She also stressed the point of service—of parent to child, of neighbor to neighbor, taking as her central thought that someone said three sweetest words in the English language are "Let me help."

Hancock county is quite proud of its schools. They are active and doing fine work and the co-operation of patrons is always appreciated. Of its best schools Dedeaux is by no means the least.

AIR FIELD LANDING REMOVED

Emergency Landing Field Back of Waveland, on OST Dismantled by Government.

Work of dismantling and removing the air field landing an Old Spanish Trail, back of Bay-Waveland, has begun and will soon be a thing of the past, even though the emergency landing field has never been used save in rare instances.

Bill Jackson, special representative from the U. S. Department of Commerce, is here from Washington this week superintending the dismantling of the elaborate equipment which the government set up about two years since and all material is carefully packed and shipped to Biloxi where it will be stored until further orders.

The removal and closing of this emergency field landing is a result of the economy bill which the President signed during Congress and is one of fourteen in number affected by the order. These were built primarily for government mail fliers but since the administration has deemed it wise to economize on so many projects and things otherwise this added protection to fliers in the event of hazard has to go under the ax of economy.

The Bay St. Louis field, as it was commonly termed was one of the best equipped of its kind, with its powerful lighting equipment, although the lights had never been used.

The work of dismantling is carried on as expeditiously as possible and shortly the site remaining will be all left to tell of what was there.

According to general procedure the grand jury will be impaneled the first morning and Judge White will deliver in his forceful characteristic manner his charge to the grand jury, outlining their duty, the law and the usual recommendations.

Irene Moore Taconi.

It is expected the grand jury will spend much time and diligence investigating the recent mysterious death of Miss Irene Moore of Bay St. Louis whose body in an unconscious state was found on the morning of Friday June 30, at the foot of the concrete seawall at intersection of Bay St. Louis bi-county auto and pedestrian bridge. Miss Moore's body, clad in a bathing suit, was found at an early hour, removed to the local hospital where she died before noon and a coroner's jury that day returned a verdict of death from unknown cause.

Gex has long made it known every effort possible will be made to ascertain the definite cause of the death of the beautiful young woman, a co-ed at Mississippi College, (Hattiesburg), and who a year previously had secretly married her student sweetheart Nolan Taconi, both of this city; whether it was a case of suicide or murder. If suicide, the prosecution will solve its case. If murder the guilty party or parties will be brought to justice and proper punishment to fit the crime administered.

WOLF RIVER CLUB HOUSE LOOTING IS CHARGED TO NEGROES

Residents of Bay St. Louis—Harrison County Officials Mawe Arrests.

Terminating a six months' investigation of the looting of a club house on Wolf River, Harrison county, Deputy Sheriff Edward Van Zandt Monday lodged two negroes in the Harrison county jail in Gulfport and charges of larceny will be lodged against them. County Prosecutor Gaston Hewes said.

They are: Cardoza Richardson and his wife, Elura, of Bay St. Louis now residing at Pass Christian. Mary Richardson of Bay St. Louis, mother of Cardoza, was also taken into custody but no charges will be filed against her, the county prosecutor said.

The arrests in Pass Christian Monday followed the extended investigation of the officer that was the outcome of the robbery of the fashionable club, known as "Oak Grove Club," owned by James L. Crump, well known New Orleans cotton broker.

Among the articles reported stolen from the club included fine linens, bath towels, silverware, dishes, chairs, one pig and several chickens. Deputy Van Zandt said that with exceptions of a few chickens, the property had been recovered and identified.

The larceny charge will be filed before Justice of the Peace E. C. Bielenberg in Pass Christian and a hearing will probably be given the defendants Friday, Prosecutor Hewes said.

Cardoza Richardson is a brother of Silas Richardson, who was hanged a few years ago in Bay St. Louis, it was said.

Cardoza Richardson when residing in Bay St. Louis always bore a good reputation and is yet a young man.

THE ARMY'S GOOD WORK.

WHEN it was decided to recruit nearly 300,000 Americans for forest camp work in the Civilian Conservation Corps, the Army was called upon to mobilize these young men, feed, clothe and take care of them in every necessary way.

It proved a very good test of the ability of the Regular Army to organize civilians into military units and indicates to some extent the role which this organization would be called upon to serve in case of war.

The Army performed this greatest peacetime service in a way which has won it commendations and reassures the country that the skeleton frame work maintained as a regular army could be quickly and properly expanded if the necessity arose.

Over 3,000 regular army officers, including those detailed for medical duty and chaplains, more than 1,700 reserve officers and 6,000 enlisted men were assigned in handling the thousands enrolled and working in these peace-time camps.

EXPECTS STABILIZATION.

SOONER or later the currencies of the world will be stabilized, thinks ex-Governor James M. Cox, Democratic candidate for President in 1920, who was a member of the American delegation to the recent London Conference.

"Free movement of gold will be established," said Mr. Cox. "I should not be surprised to see devaluation of the dollar when we have had sufficient rise in commodity prices. Then I look for the nations of the world to establish orderly exchange. Restrictions on exchange are having a demoralizing effect on world trade."

The purpose of the London Conference was to adjust some of the international problems affecting trade and commerce but it failed to accomplish very much because the situations in the various countries were not so fully stabilized that the individual nations could map out mutually satisfactory programs. Governor Cox believes that another economic conference will come a little later and at this some form of co-operative worldwide economic planning will be adopted.

SEEKING OIL IN HANCOCK COUNTY.

TESTING for deposits of oil in Hancock county and leasing of lands over a wide area gives rise for a new hope, a tangible something that might lead to a major development. Since the cutting of virgin timber in the county, perhaps its greatest asset has gone out and possibly discovery of oil might fill the void.

The contention that oil exists in Hancock county is nothing new. It has been repeatedly asserted. Some five years since extensive research was carried on for over a period of long time. The result has never been disclosed. Now extensive tests are again in process and leasing of land in heavy acreage is bound to be taken as an indication of serious consideration.

We await with anticipation and hopeful of the future for Hancock county. And we are of the opinion that results of more than ordinary magnitude will follow.

AIR TRAVEL GROWS.

INCREASED travel by air is indicated by the announcement of the Pan-American Airways of a $5,000,000 expansion program. An air base will be constructed at Miami at a cost of $1,000,000 and the announcement said that most of the work contemplated would be done in Florida.

Florida, as the southern-most point in the United States, is the jumping off place for air travel to the West Indies, Central America, Panama and South America. The Pan-American Airways Company has been the pioneer in developing aerial transportation to the South and the expansion program being undertaken shows how far this has been done.

It won't be long before the blue eagle will begin to bite.

Circulation, meaning paid up subscribers, is what makes newspaper advertising different from circulars and ought to be what an advertiser buys.

UNIVERSAL NAVAL RACE.

NOTWITHSTANDING the various efforts to secure a disarmament agreement, it appears probable that all the larger nations in the world will soon become involved in a wild scramble for naval power. One by one announcements have been made in recent weeks indicating that almost every country possessed of an appreciable naval force expects to enlarge it considerably during the next few years.

The French government has been the most recent to espouse an ambitious naval program. A number of "super-cruisers" will be added to the fleet. One of this type, the Dunkerque, is already under construction, a comparatively small cruiser but heavily armored and carrying heavy guns. It was designed in answer to Germany's "pocket battleships."

The United States, Japan and Great Britain have each announced a large naval building program within the past few months. With France increasing her naval force it will be regarded as certain that Italy will follow suit, because there is an intense rivalry between these two Mediterranean nations for the control of that Sea.

The race between Germany and Great Britain for naval supremacy was a contributing cause to the World War. The present world-wide construction program for warships is not confined to any two nations but, without a doubt, the increased efforts on the part of these five naval powers to increase their fleets will cause a tightening in the tension which already exists between some of them.

The world situation contains a number of explosive problems. The probability is that warfare between two major countries will break out between 1936 and 1940, unless some agreement is reached to settle the difficulties.

RE-STATE AN OLD TAX PRINCIPLE.

IT is a healthy sign that a growing number of citizens—including thousands whose only connection with the utility industry is in the role of customers—are looking with distaste on present tax policies toward that industry.

The other day a United States Senator made a very frank and startling statement. He said that he and his colleagues know how easy it is to get almost any tax measure aimed at the utilities, passed, irrespective of its merits. The attitude is simply to sock the utilities in the hope of political reward.

Who is going to pay for this? Investors will pay—people who saved a few dollars and put them into utility securities in the hope of receiving a reasonable return in the future. Workers will pay—men and women who are now employed by the industry and who must be laid off if taxation forces further retrenchment. Communities will pay—the utility industry has always been one of the most potent factors in community progress and development. The average citizen will pay—he who depends on the utility industry for first-class, reasonably-priced service at all times.

The United States government has done the unprecedented in shifting a utility sales tax from the customer to the investor. States have adopted onerous special taxes which must be borne by the utility alone, and no other business. The effect is beginning to be understood, and a constantly growing portion of the public is becoming aroused to the danger.

It used to be an axiom that taxation should be equitable, falling on all businesses with the same weight, favoring and penalizing none. That principle should be re-stated firmly now.

MORE RAILROAD LEGISLATION.

THERE is already talk of further transportation legislation to be considered when Congress convenes again.

It is an open secret that Mr. Roosevelt's recently passed bill does not go nearly so far as he intends. It is simply a start. It recognizes a fact of the utmost importance—that the railroads are one of our most important industries, that they have suffered extremely from depression, that even in times of prosperity they were perplexed with difficulties, and that their salvation is vital to recovery. Its principal purpose is to promote higher railroad efficiency, through consolidation of competing lines, and the elimination of duplicate facilities.

Once this is done, the way will be cleared for attacking the greatest problem of all-unfair competition, much of which stems from government-subsidized carriers. Barges ply the tax-built waterways—creating deficits to be made up by more taxes, and taking business that would otherwise go to the rails. Buses and trucks operate on the publicly-built highways, unregulated by the Federal government, which so stringently controls the railroad industry. And so it goes.

Yes, a start has been made, but much remains to be done. The American public will be watching the future trend of transport legislation with the keenest interest.

A GOOD SIGN.

MRS. Jessie Costello was recently acquitted by a Massachusetts jury on the charge of murdering her husband.

Immediately thereafter some theatrical producers and the lady prepared to capitalize upon her notoriety by starting her out on a theatrical tour.

The fact that a prominent trade journal immediately protested and the head of the theatrical organization ordered that the act be withdrawn is reassuring and a sign of some desire to keep entertainment clean and wholesome.

Regardless of the merits or demerits of the lady's experience, the fact remains that she was not an actress. Her act would not attract people for any art but merely because of her notoriety. The public should resent being offered such entertainment so that a public crime or some other cause for notoriety could be used to make money.

Legitimate artists should be in the forefront of any movement to prevent such a capitalization of publicity on the part of inexperienced actors and actresses. It does not help in the development of art nor does it improve the standing of those men and women in the profession who have sincerely worked to place their art upon a high and proper plane.

MERELY THEORETICAL

By GEORGE E. SCHILLING
(For The Sea Coast Echo)

FREEDOM.

SENATOR McCarren, of Nevada, is badly worried, according to a recent press report. He says that individual liberty is at stake in the struggle against the N. R. A. He is quoted as declaring that the new laws are "an avalanche that sweeps away the structures fought for and reared by the great Jefferson and his adherents." The senator's oratory is superior to his historical accuracy, but, in general, his idea has some large mixture of truth. Nevertheless it is not easy to imagine Thomas Jefferson flying to the defense of billion dollar corporations against the welfare of farmers and workmen.

Jefferson never saw or heard of a railroad train or a telegram. He knew almost nothing of business corporations, except the United States Bank, and he was opposed to that. He had nothing to do with factories, for almost none were begun until after he had left the presidency. A farmer himself, he represented the farmers, who comprised about ninety per cent of the people at that time. His Embargo act was a worse blow to American business, and business liberty, than anything we can easily imagine. Jefferson was a man of his own time, and he dealt with the problems of his own day. Our problems are so different that we cannot easily imagine what he would have to say about them.

We must do our own thinking, not in the eighteenth century, but in the twentieth. Jefferson himself thought that a revolution ought to occur about every twenty years, to take care of new conditions. A good many of us believe that a peaceful, constructive revolution is a great deal better for all concerned than the other kind. If something has to be cut, it is probably more advisable, on the whole, to cut off a man's business liberty partially than to cut off his head entirely.

As things stand today our liberty and our very lives are threatened by a power that Jefferson never imagined. A number of years ago some writer expressed it in a new decimal table which has at least as much wit as exaggeration:

"Ten mills makes one trust.
Ten trusts make one combine.
Ten combines make one merger.
Ten mergers make one magnate.
One magnate makes all the money."

For the last fifty years we have been trying to restrict the abuse of power by such magnates; beginning with the original Interstate Commerce Act. There can be no reasonable doubt that our previous laws have been mild and weak in comparison with the restraints we shall impose in the future.

At present the restrictions apply mainly to hours of labor and minimum wages because the problem of unemployment is the most acute and pressing. (We have not yet learned any way of creating a market for our excessive production except by increasing payrolls.) But it is practically certain that future regulations will govern prices all the way from raw material to finished goods, and then will control such matters as qualities of goods and allocation of markets. The control will be exercised at the bottleneck, that is the larger establishments where materials are concentrated or processed in quantity, such as grain elevators, cotton gins, blast furnaces etc. The small business units, especially retailers, will be interfered with as little as possible, although they will not be allowed to "chisel." It is to be expected that businesses which cannot meet fair competition and pay expenses will have to close, just exactly as they do today. One advantage of the loss of "liberty" is that unfair competition will be very much reduced. It is hoped that excessive profits will be reduced, and that reasonable profits will be protected far better than they ever have been.

There was a theory, based on conditions in Jefferson's time, that the general interest was best served by the greatest individual freedom. This theory is still very dear to the successful magnates, to most conservatives, and to a few others. But it has been very much discredited by the present depression, and, as mentioned in a previous discussion of "The Iron Law of Wages," it completely disregards the interest of hired workers. Moreover it has wrecked a large number of magnates, for even millionaires are going broke. There are a good many of them who, like workmen hunting jobs, will be delighted to sacrifice more of their liberty for the sake of more security. Corporation losses last year were twice as much as corporation profits.

To the progressive the chain of logic seems both clear and simple. Our industrial organization ought to be managed in the interest of society, of "the greatest good to the greatest number" rather than for the supposed profit of a few individuals. The only agency we have to represent the social interest is the government. The present emergency is so severe that we cannot afford to allow for the slow system of checks and balances to delay action, and so we are obliged to intrust emergency powers temporarily to a single individual. We are reminded of the old Roman formula for conferring dictatorial power in an emergency: "to take measures for the safety of the commonwealth at discretion." The dictatorship is a temporary office. It may succeed. Everything else we know has failed.

SAUNTERINGS From Where The West Begins.

By JOHN T. MEYERS.
For The Sea Coast Echo.

Bay-Waveland, Sept. 6, 1933.

HOME... the place that seems a rainbow's end to one who wanders from this treasured spot. In this treasured harbor of contentment cares and trials of the outside world are cast aside—forgotten. One lives again amid shadows of the misty past. Memories of old friends and haunts are revived. Vividly passing in reflection, these golden scenes and experiences are pages from the book of yesterdays.

Man may roam the universe, view its marvelous wonders far and wide, gain riches, power, and wisdom of the sages from his travels. But nowhere on earth will he find complete joy and happiness to compare with home, a mother's love, devoted relatives and sincere friends.

FROM a Pullman window: The spirit of adventure as the trainmen signal "all aboard." Tardy passengers scurrying to reach the train. Huffing and puffing of the giant engine. Sense of motion as the station slowly slips from view. "We're off!" Modest little farm houses along the route. Cattle grazing in peaceful pastures, unmindful of the roaring world outside. Cotton pickers to work in the fields. Sunburned men, women and children, dragging large sacks along the rows as they pick. The little tots waving friendly greeting, pausing the moment from their laborous task.

BRIGHT new cars park about smaller stations. Women dressed in popular styles worn by their city cousins. Wonder if depression is really as bad as painted. Motorists on the highway alongside racing with the train. Hope they do not meet us on a railway crossing.

Train conductors always friendly, and possess a good judgment of human nature. Never have seen one who wouldn't pat a child's head, or smile gallantly in the direction of a pretty young woman passenger. Train crews are noted for their courtesy, and attention to comfort and safety of passengers in their charge. This is particularly true of elderly or ill passengers.

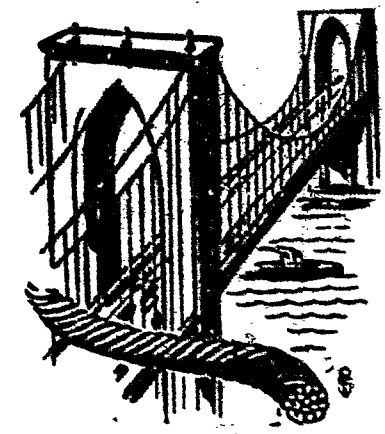

Enjoy studying fellow passengers, unobserved, through half closed eyes, permitting the imagination to run wild. That calm, well-tailored, exotic type woman across the aisle. Fancy classifies her as a secret service operator on some deep, secretive mission involving international intrigue. A number would serve for her name in the official records. A cunning, dangerous individual... perhaps.

The portly gentleman several seats back earnestly engaged in his newspaper. A business general, perhaps, guiding the destiny of some important commercial enterprise. Even now his keen mind is planning some strategic move. P. S. (confidentially) we were 'all wet' in doting both cases. The exotic secret service woman, our wife informed later, was a Sunday school teacher from San Antonio. Meeting in the smoking compartment, the portly gentleman proved to be a hotel room clerk on vacation. Maybe we'll hit it right next time.

Thrilling to ride through rain storm by night. A feeling of security as the driving rain slashes against the window pane. The mighty steel monarch of the rails plows ahead. Safe, certain, and reliable. Thoughts of the engineer, so alert and watchful at his trotters in the cabin of his locomotive ahead. Flashes of glowing yellow breaking the inky darkness outside, as the train roars past small stations. Save for a lone telegraph operator, the scenes are devoid of human existence. That spooky wail of the engine whistle, as it echoes through the stillness of midnight.

Arrival at New Orleans. Union Station. Something electrifying about train arrivals. Passengers eager to alight. Anxious faces line the platform outside, searching for loved ones amid the surging crowds. A roaring hum, and bustle of activity. Happy shrieks of joy. Tender embraces. Here is human emotions at fever tempo. Red cap porters dive for baggage. The shouts of taxi drivers deafen the ear. But this exciting din and turmoil bespeaks wonderful melody to the eager homcomer.

Bay-Waveland Notes: Creditable representation of Blue Eagle banners on display by patriotic merchants. Moonlight in the pines presents an unforgettable sight of beauty. The genuine hospitality of Gulf Coast people cannot be equaled. That caged collection of native game life outside Mollere's I. G. A. store at Waveland. At present Mr. Mollere's miniature zoo contains several fox a squirrel, monkey, Belgium hare, a cotton tail rabbit and baby bunny, and pigeons. More specimens are to be added. Clever idea Mr. Mollere. The emergency aviation filed near Brown's Vineyard on the Spanish Thail is being removed. Equipment is to be stored at Biloxi. Labor Day motorists returning to New Orleans from a holiday along the Gulf Coast gave Spanish Trail the appearance of a great White Way Monday night. Saunterings has yet to find a city or town where 3.2 beer is not being sold. The old tune "How Dry I Am" is out of date it seems.

One Strand Won't Carry a Bridge . . . . .

THE builder who expects one slim cable to hold up a great bridge is doomed to disappointment. The saver who expects a single deposit to support his plans for financial independence also faces failure. It takes many strands of wire, woven together, to carry the one. And a bridge across the gulf of Want needs many savings deposits, made regularly, to make it secure.

Merchants Bank & Trust Co.

Senator Vest's Tribute To A Dog.

"The best friend a man has in the world, may turn against him and become his enemy. His son or daughter that he has reared with loving care may prove ungrateful. Those who are nearest and dearest to us, those whom we trust with our happiness and our good name may become traitors to their faith. The money that a man has he may lose. It flies away from him, perhaps when he needs it most. A man's reputation may be sacrificed in a moment of ill-considered action. The people who are prone to fall on their knees to do us honor when success is with us may be the first to throw the stone of malice when failure settles its cloud upon our heads. The one absolutely unselfish friend that man can have in this selfish world, the one that never deserts him, the one that never proves ungrateful or treacherous, is his dog. A man's dog stands by him in prosperity and poverty, in health and sickness. He will sleep on the cold ground where the wintry winds blow and the snow drives fiercely, if only he may be near his master's side. He will kiss the hand that has no food to offer; he will lick the wounds and sores that come in encounter with the roughness of the world. He guards the sleep of his pauper master as if he were a prince. When all other friends desert he remains. When riches take wings and reputation falls to pieces, he is a constant in his love as the sun in its journey through the heavens.

"If fortune drives the master forth an outcast in the world, friendless and homeless, the faithful dog asks no higher privilege than that of accompanying him, to guard against danger, to fight against his enemies, and when the last scene of all comes, and death takes the master in its embrace, and his body is laid away in the cold ground, no matter if all other friends pursue their way, there by the graveside will the noble dog be found, his head between his paws, his eyes sad, but open in alert watchfulness, faithful and true even in death."

TO THE N. R. A.

People of these United States,
The N. R. A. calls you;
The Eagle blue your hand awaits.
To spread its wings anew.

Symbol of power in this land,
Rising to help the poor;
Bringing Brotherhood hand in hand,
Prosperity to restore.

Sign of our strength and union blest
Working unto the end;
Of Patriotism true the test,
With Love and Hope to blend.

O! N. R. A. Depression crush,
And drive it far away;
To Victory bright and great we rush,
While Justice holds its sway.

The scales have fallen from our eyes,
We lift our heads on high;
Gold's light is leading from the skies,
On Him we must rely.

WITH THE STATE PRESS.

HERE'S GOOD NEWS.

(Meridian Star)

ASSURANCE that four new national forest units will be established in Mississippi by the Federal government is real "good news." Approximately 1,000,000 acres of land in four different sections of the state will compose the units, and Uncle Sam will spend about $5,000,000 to secure the land.

The success of the CCC camps over the nation has led the government to secure more acreage in southern states, where the workers will be transferred for the cold, winter months. And that means millions of dollars for the states in which new units will be located.

The actual money spent in the states for the land and for supplies to run the camps is not the whole story, however.

In years to come—ten, twenty and thirty years hence—we shall be able to see the real benefits.

Timber stands will be improved; soil erosion projects will benefit farm lands; flood control projects will help to solve the ever-present problem of river overflows.

The south, with its mild winter climate, offers to the CCC everything necessary in the furtherance of its program.

MORE EXTRAVAGANCE.

(Picayune Item)

GOVERNMENT expenses seem to be the popular topic for editorial comment. The following taken from an exchange dispenses with all argument so far as balance the budget is concerned, but leaves open for discussion the amount of bonds owed by the state of Louisiana. According to figures taken from the Times-Picayune, the debts of the Pelican State would come nearer being a half billion dollars. City Mississippians, but if interested, wait for the Pelican State:

The bonded indebtedness of Mississippi is above $41,000,000. It could be worse, but no tax payer wishes it to be so. We "balanced the budget" by issuing additional bonds a few days ago. We hope with all earnestness that it won't have to be necessary to "balance the budget" very often.

Louisiana's bonded indebtedness is more than $307,000,000—a pretty big price to pay for luxuries like Huey Long.

LONG AND LONG ISLAND.

(Gulfport Guide)

PROBABLY the mistake Huey Long made when he got his nose punched on Long Island Saturday was in thinking the Island was named after him and was perhaps a part of his principality.

DAY OF PRAYER.

Nov. 11, 1933 has been set aside for prayer. The Guild of Christ Church has arranged a schedule to run from 9 A. M. till 5 P. M., and hope all creeds in Bay St. Louis will join them. Reminders of same will be published from time to time so that everyone may think this over deeply and decide to help.

Spinster—Has the canary had his bath yet?
Maid—Yis, mum, ye can come in now.

"What is meant by descending to personalities?"
"Talking about a man's feet."

"I want you to know, officer, that I move in the best circles."
"Yessir. Keep moving."

BILTMORE CASTLE NEAR ASHEVILLE IS REPUTED FINEST HOME IN COUNTRY

Costing Several Million Dollars Was Built Thirty-Five Years Ago By Late George W. Vanderbilt—Opened To Public $2.00 Visiting Fee—Many Objects of Interest—750 Employees.

BILTMORE HOUSE, which, because of its magnitude, remarkable grounds and gardens, priceless collection of paintings, antiques and other objects of art, is unique among American country establishments, was opened to the public March 15, 1930.

The house was built 35 years ago at a cost of several million dollars by the late George W. Vanderbilt, who spent much time traveling all over the world to collect art pieces. It contains, heretofore none except guests of the family have ever entered Biltmore House or known of the invaluable collection that Mr. Vanderbilt accumulated.

The collection includes the chateau Napoleon took with him to St. Helena, Cardinal Richelieu's ceremonial robes, Gobelin tapestries, a 14th century Turkish rug, the ceiling from an old Italian castle, innumerable carvings and bronzes, original Sargents, Baldinis, Whistlers, and other objects of almost fabulous worth.

Construction of Biltmore House was begun in 1890. Richard Hunt, New York architect, designed the house along lines that reflected the influence of chateaus of the French Renaissance. Hand tooled Indiana limestone was chosen as the material for the exterior. The foundation of the house covers four acres of ground. Frederick Law Olmstead, designer of Central Park in New York City, planned the gardens and grounds of the vast estate.

Five years were required to build the enormous country house. During this time Mr. Vanderbilt literally combed the four corners of the earth to acquire all kinds of objects of art and decorations for the interior. He procured a ceiling from an old castle in Italy, a refectory table from an English monastery, Ming dynasty China, rare books, rare tapestries and paintings, and carvings and priceless pieces of every imaginable kind.

The house was completed in 1895 and was opened with a big Christmas celebration. During the 35 years that elapsed since the house was built, no pictures have ever been made of the interior. Biltmore House contains 40 master bedrooms, besides servants' quarters, baths, drawing rooms, a huge banquet hall, library, kitchen, courts, billiard rooms, and galleries. It varies in height with its towers and offsets.

Visitors are admitted to the estate through the Biltmore Lodge Gate. Entrance to the house is by way of the huge main door in the front of the mansion. At the left of the main entrance hall is the "Grand Staircase" modeled after the staircase of the Chateau Blois, in France. This staircase is a broad, easy spiral that extends to the topmost floor of the house without supports other than its own arch construction. A gigantic wrought iron chandelier extends downward from the roof of the house through the center of the spiral of the lower floor.

From the entrance hall, visitors are directed into the "Court of Palms," a sunken marble circular area which contains all kinds of growing plants of varied sizes and types. Here the central figure is a fountain which is the figure of a boy and a swan, by Karl Bitter, outstanding Austro-

American sculptor. The Palm Court ceiling and the ceilings of the adjoining halls and rooms are supported by a series of carved wood and stone arches.

From the Palm Court, visitors proceed into the Oak Drawing Room on the first floor of the house. On the oak-paneled walls are rows of unnumbered engravings by notable artists too numerous to mention. The heads of deer, buffalo, bear, moose, and other big game hang about the room.

From the Drawing Room, the visitors will pass along a side of the Palm Court, where there are British Museum copies of the frieze at the Parthenon in Athens, into the Banqueting Hall. This room was copied from an old Norman Banqueting Hall. It is 72 feet long and has a ceiling that is 75 feet high. A triple fireplace with unusual wrought iron andirons is at one end of the room. On the walls hang five Gobelin tapestries depicting the story of Vulcan and the love of Venus and Mars. They were made in the 16th century for Francis I, of France, and are woven of silk and gold. It is said that they adorned his tent at his historic meeting with Henry VIII of England at the Field of the Cloth of Gold, in the year 1515. Higher up on the walls hang the flags of the thirteen original States. Over the fireplace there is an elaborate and beautiful carving by Karl Bitter. Above the main entrance is carved the motto, "Do Pacem Domine in Diebus Nostris."

"Give Peace, God, to Our Time." At the end of the hall opposite the fireplace is an immense rack of Swedish coppers and containers, reaching to the ceiling. From the Banqueting Hall, visitors go into the Dining Room of Biltmore House. The walls are covered with Spanish leather above a marble panel. Velvet and gold Italian chairs stand about. A Wedgwood fireplace is at one side of the room.

The next place of interest is the Print Room, on the walls of which hang scores of rare prints, and of particular historic interest is the ancient engraving of the history of Maximilian the Great, by Max Durer. In this room is to be found the inlaid chess table that once belonged to Napoleon, and which he used on the island of St. Helena. On the table is a glass cabinet containing his chessmen. Against the north wall of this room stands a rare and elaborately carved Italian ebony chest, which contains a myriad of secret compartments and represents infinite artistic labor in its construction and decoration. From the windows of this room may be had one of the most exquisite views available anywhere. In the distance is the French Brad River winding into the mountains.

From the Print Room, visitors move on into the "Tapestry Gallery," which is 100 feet long. Walls are covered with rare Flemish tapestries. On the walls, too, are outstanding paintings. On shelves around the gallery are priceless ceramics. An ancient refectory table, made of boards perhaps six inches thick, stands in the center of the gallery. The gallery has a unique beamed ceiling, exquisitely colored. The Tapestry Gallery opens into the Library.

The library contains more than 25,000 volumes. Many are works of art in gardening and architecture which were collected by Mr. Vanderbilt. Tiers of books line the walls from floor to ceiling. The ceiling of the library is especially interesting. It is a remarkable canvas procured from an old Italian castle by Mr. Vanderbilt upon the express condition that its original owner's name never should be disclosed. Mr. Vanderbilt kept the secret and it died with him.

At one side of the library is a carved black marble fireplace that is nine feet wide and six feet high. Around the top of the library runs a small gallery so the upper tiers of books may be reached. This gallery is approached by means of a little circular staircase near the fireplace. The chimney from the fireplace is run back of the gallery so that only one staircase is needed to reach it. Around the library are several large Ming dynasty bowls. The woodwork is walnut.

From the library visitors go back through the Court of Palms and up the Grand Staircase to the second floor. Along the halls are cabinets filled with carvings and objects of art. The principal feature of the second floor, possibly, is the "First Hall." This is a great room in which hang innumerable paintings and in which also are numbers of valuable treasures. Sargents of Olmstead and of Hunt, the designer of the estate and of the house, hang at one end of the First Hall. The portraits are life-sized and were painted by Sargent at Biltmore House. There is a painting, "Rosita," by Zuloaga and a painting by Zorn. In the First Hall also is a 14th century Turkish rug, 45 by 90 feet, of rare design and beauty.

Opening from the First Hall is the Louis XVI Room and it contains fine specimens of furniture from this period. The walls are covered with red damask. The room is oval-shaped and the bed is set back into a recess in the wall so that it is half-canopied.

Mr. Vanderbilt's, also is open for inspection. It contains massive furniture and furnishings of Spanish and Portuguese period design. From the "South Bedroom" visitors will go through the Oak Sitting Room. This is distinguished particularly for the extraordinary collection of bronzes which it contains and the views from its fine portraits by Sargent. Notable paintings, like the bronzes and other pieces of art, are scattered throughout the house until it is difficult to mention them all.

While some minor changes have been made in the interior arrangement, such as the rehanging of the two robes of Cardinal Richelieu, which are a part of the Vanderbilt collection, in the main, the house will be left just as it was occupied by the family of the owner and the atmosphere of a museum is avoided. Southward from the house and the esplanade are the various gardens. Directly south of the end of the house is a terrace and the swimming pool. East of this are the Italian gardens with sculptured figures and three lily pools. Below the swimming pool and terrace and between them and the Italian gardens is a long overgrown arbor flanked by a stone wall which is covered with vines and banked with shrubs. This is known as the summer garden. Beyond a long and square-cut hedge of holly that borders the Italian garden on the south are the spring garden, shrub garden, and wall garden which contains four acres of rare and beautiful flowers. Beyond these is the greenhouse which contains principally palms.

The gardens are regarded as masterpieces and are beautiful in any season. Spaces between them are grown up in rhododendron, laurel, holly, arbutus, balsam, and a profusion of all kinds of trees.

Biltmore House is the center of an estate that contains 12,000 acres. It once included 120,000 acres, but much of this land was turned over to Pisgah National Forest by Mr. Vanderbilt. The estate has 17 miles of macadam roads and 120 miles of riding trails and dirt roads. More than 750 persons are employed on the estate. A large number of these work at the Biltmore Dairies or in allied lines. The dairy herd, incidentally, includes about 700 milk cows, virtually all pure bred Jerseys. The Biltmore Herd has long been recognized as one of the finest in the country.

An admission charge is made, estimated as sufficient to defray the expenses of opening the house and grounds to the public. Admission tickets are on sale at Biltmore Estate Office, in Biltmore, at the Asheville Chamber of Commerce, M. V. Moore & Co., and the principal hotels.

BABIES—LOTS OF 'EM IF GARBO MARRIES

GRETA GARBO

If Greta Garbo marries it will be for just one reason—children. And, although marriage for this reason means the end of her career, the Great Garbo has seriously considered it.

This, among other revelations, is made in a new biography, the famous screen star. "She wanted," it says, "no small, modern family. But many sturdy sons and daughters."

Today, in her solitary grandeur, she may regret her decision, but if she does no one would know it. In no way does she show she feels the cruelties of a fate that gave her everything a woman could want except—children.

The man for whom she wanted to bear these children was none other than John Gilbert. In a current issue of True Story, the writer goes on to say that this couple debated the question of marriage in 1928.

Love, position, adulation, riches—all of these were hers. She didn't give a rap for the conventions. There was just one consideration for her in marriage—children. But Garbo knew she dared not do it. "She would not cheat either her husband and children, or the art to which she was bound with bands of steel."

They went their separate ways.

Mississippi Boy, Hitch-Hiker, Gets $100 From Hoover

A Mississippi boy, hitch-hiking somewhere in the West, is $100 wealthier today and still flashing the smile that won the century note from former President Hoover.

John Wade Gordon, 21 kinsman of daye and Jackson, was the recipient of the Hoover generosity. Although claiming Memphis as his home, young Gordon is a native of Mississippi.

Young Gordon was walking along a highway in California when a large car came zooming down the road. Signalling for a ride, the car halted and the youth climbed in and found himself seated by the former president.

Questioned closely by the former President, young Gordon admitted he was without finances.

When the former stopped in San Francisco, Mr. Hoover shook hands with Gordon, pressing a $100 bill in his hands.—Jackson Daily News.

"Fool" Laws.

Last week's Bay County Herald published a list of "fool" laws, and from the long list we copy the following:

Women's bathing suits worn on South Park Beach, Chicago, must wear quarter arm sleeves.

It is illegal to peel an orange in a California hotel room.

Hire your neighbor's cook and you can be arrested in Florida.

It is against the law in Nebraska for women to wear skirts more than eight inches from the floor.

In Massachusetts it is illegal for a woman to appear in public with her face powdered or rouged; also for any one to promote a masked ball.

A Wisconsin law forbids the use of a rhinograph.

One must have a permit from the sheriff to buy a chicken after dark in Idaho.

In Connecticut it is against the law to shave on Sunday.

In South Dakota when trains meet at a crossing of two railroads each must wait until the other one crosses.

That South Dakota law is a joke, too, as you might say, but it must be delightful to live in Wisconsin, where it is illegal to own a graphophone.—Exc.

VICTOR JORY TRIUMPHS IN FOX

FILM, "THE DEVIL'S IN LOVE"

Star Gives Forceful Portrayal With Loretta Young As Feminine Lead—Story is Splendid Vehicle.

The hopes that the Fox studio has been holding out for Victor Jory are now justified. His first performance as a screen star in "The Devil's In Love," at the A. & G. Theatre, is proof of his ability. Jory gives a performance that should long be remembered.

The story he has been given for his initial stellar performance contains the elements for complete dramatic portrayal. The characterization would require any actor to give everything of which was capable. Jory comes through with better than flying colors. He is an actor of rare ability.

The plot of "The Devil's In Love" is laid in Africa. The various phases of its story centre at a Foreign Legion post in the desert, in a busy seaport town, in a common hostelry and in the revivifying atmosphere of a mission. The story takes its hero from an honorable position as a surgeon to that of a derelict among derelicts. It shows him on the downgrade where step by step he loses station to reach the deepest of despair.

It shows him being galvanized into action by an emergency that calls forth the small spark of courage left in him. And it brings him back to success and a large share of happiness.

Loretta Young has the leading feminine role opposite Jory in a romance that will make you respond with whole-hearted sympathy. Miss Young is one of the most beautiful women on the screen; her work is unusually refreshing. Wilhelm Dieterle did a fine job of direction. The story is by Harry Hervey and the screen adaptation by Howard Estabrook.

BILBO'S 'DREAM HOUSE' IS OF INTEREST TO THE CURIOUS AND TOURISTS

Structure Near Poplarville Remains Unfinished—Was Projected Cherished Object of Former Governor's Life—Many Claims Pending—Dream House May Never be Completed.

When Theodore G. Bilbo sat in a jail cell at Oxford, Miss., in 1923, serving a 10-day sentence for contempt of the federal court, has conversation with friends centered on the "dream house" he planned to build in Juniper Grove near his old home at Poplarville.

"After I'm elected governor again," said the "Stormy Petrel" of Mississippi politics, "you can mark it in the book that I'll do at least one thing. I'm going to build that dream house."

"The man Bilbo," as the former governor was known for two decades in campaigns which took him to every cross-road of the Magnolia State, sits again in a federal building. He is at Washington, "trouble shooting" for the department of agriculture in his capacity of expert newspaper clipper.

Reports are sifting back to Mississippi that "the man Bilbo" is pleased highly with his new job, and his former staunch supporters in many a political battle are beginning to wonder if he's quit dreaming of the mansion in Juniper Grove.

Long Cherished Dream.

You know how it is with dreams. Just as you are reaching the gorgeous climax, the alarm clock goes crazy.

Former Governor Bilbo has dreamed of the Juniper Grove mansion for many years. He told of his dreams when he was an obscure state legislator before his inauguration for a first term as governor in January, 1916.

As editor of the Free Lance, his political weekly, "the man Bilbo" dreamed of "another term as governor" and of the "dream house." His dreams continued when he was serving his second term in the governor's mansion from 1928 to 1932.

During that second term as governor the "Stormy Petrel" started building his "dream house." The mansion was almost finished when he left office, after many battles with the state legislature. Not even near finished were plans of "the man Bilbo" for a brick highway system in Mississippi.

Roses Last Longer.

The unfinished "dream house," even its ownership in dispute, stands today within sight of the cedar grove in which former Governor Bilbo was born 56 years ago, visited only by curious tourists and by errant chickens.

To one side, half an acre of roses are making a valiant but losing battle against vandal grass. Former Governor Bilbo loves roses and started the garden with the house. These roses have lasted longer than most dreams.

The Bilbos—father and mother of the political leader—had hard going. The log cabin in which Theo was born in Juniper Grove on October 13, 1877, was not like the log cabins which are pictured in fashionable magazines. It was built of logs, not because they were beautiful but because they were cheap—when the builder did all the chopping himself.

Saved Piece to Pine.

"Papa" and "Mama" Bilbo didn't let any work get by their willing hands. Dr. C. L. Smith, son-in-law of the ex-governor, can exhibit a piece of heart pine hewn by the father and mother of Theodore for the floor of that cabin. A puncheon board, Bilbo saved that piece of pine for a long time—intending to build it into the mantel of his dream house.

The boy grew up full of ambition. His chief ambition was to build a brick mansion upon the site of the log cabin in the clear thicket. Through the University of Nashville, through the law departments of Vanderbilt and the University of Michigan, he carried that ambition. Teacher in the Mississippi county schools, lawyer in Poplarville, and firebrand in Mississippi politics, he never forgot that ambition. Finally he reached the point where he could begin work.

Dream Grew

Eight miles southeast of Poplarville, on the Gulfport road, it stands—the substantial but disappointing beginning of that "dream house."

It could not be built upon the site of the old log cabin, and the privations that stood for—the routing of the road made that impracticable. But the foundations were laid as close to that as possible, and the cedar grove, what is left of it, is a part of the Bilbo dream picture, as emphatic a note upon the landscape of abandoned hopes as the despairing rose garden.

Great dreams the boy Theodore must have dreamed; greater dreams Lawyer Bilbo, State Senator Bilbo, Governor Bilbo must have dreamed. In the uncompleted mansion, you see their outward and visible form.</

We'll tell you how to have the Nicest Fried Foods
you ever tasted . . .

Fry with Snowdrift. We've good reasons for dropping that hint. Snowdrift is so pure that it heats perfectly to high frying temperatures. (Most other shortenings smoke and burn.) The crisp crust forms quickly, with Snowdrift, and the food cooks light and delicious.

Besides—Snowdrift is itself so fine and delicate in flavor, it just naturally makes good-tasting food.

SIGNERS OF NRA CARDS

The Chamber of Commerce officials wish to express appreciation and thanks to the ladies forming the committee, realizing the discomfort of working under adverse conditions of a time when the summer days are hottest and not only unflinching in work but unflinching in their endeavor. It is also to be said to the credit of those who readily and gladly signed the pledge cards. It is reported that less than a half dozen refused to sign the cards.
